

The Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility

Who is ICCR?

The Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility (www.iccr.org) is a membership organization which seeks a global community built on justice and sustainability through transformation of the corporate world.

Founded in 1971, at a time when the power of several social and religious movements converged, ICCR members first gained international attention for their efforts to end apartheid in South Africa. Today ICCR members are at the center of the Corporate Social Responsibility movement they began nearly forty years ago. Faith guides and shapes our priorities and we seek members and partners who embrace collaboration within this context. By promoting the transformation of corporate policies and practices, our members are certain that they are building a more just and sustainable world.

Why become a member of ICCR?

ICCR members have a long tradition of work in areas of Human Rights, Environmental Stewardship and Corporate Governance. ICCR provides members with the research, resources and tools necessary to promote real changes in corporate practice and behavior. Members have the opportunity to be well-informed about cutting edge issues in corporate social responsibility.

Working with ICCR, members sponsor shareholder resolutions, engage in dialogues with corporate management, participate in public hearings, partner with community organizations and raise awareness of issues through broad-based, outreach campaigns to key decision makers.

As we look towards the future, our growing coalition seeks new members who bring with them new visions and fresh ideas. The Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility is committed to broadening our membership by actively reaching out to all communities of faith who share our goals.

In short, ICCR members are “inspired by faith and committed to action,” as we work together to bridge the divide between morality and markets.
