Report to the UUA Board on the Open Space process at GA 2007

At General Assembly in Portland, all participants, delegates and non-delegates, had the opportunity to participate in an Open Space process. According to organizational development specialists Barbara Benedict Bunker and Billie Alban, Open Space [Technology] is one of a series of large-group interventions in which a critical mass of people participates in:

- Understanding the need for change
- Analyzing the current reality and deciding what needs to change
- Generating ideas about how to change existing processes
- Implementing and supporting change and making it work¹

In the case of General Assembly, the critical change was to present an opportunity and a structured process by which participants could let the UUA Board know what they thought the Board should pay attention to in order to strengthen our faith community. As the Board continues its exploration of policy governance, they requested input from GA attendees about the Ends statements they are creating. When UUA committees, commissions and task groups have requested input from delegates, member congregations and attendees, the results have been mixed. Sometimes a significant number of responses have been provided, and sometimes very few responses have come in. The use of Open Space [Technology] made use of the fact that more than 5,500 people registered for General Assembly in Portland, and were in one place at one time when they could take advantage of a process by which they could let Board members know what they thought.

Publicity about Open Space [Technology] was sent to all member congregations and GA attendees, and publicized in the UU World. Links were created so that UU bloggers could discuss the Open Space process during GA. A letter of invitation to participate in OST was issued by Moderator Gini Courter and project director Dr. Helen Bishop.

Facilitators were recruited by contacting such groups as the UU Ministers Association, the Society for Community Ministries, the Liberal Religious Educators Association, the UU Musicians Network, the Association of UU Administrators, DRUUMM, Allies for Racial Equity, the Church of the Larger Fellowship, the Partner Church Council, Interweave, C*UUYAN, the UU Christian Fellowship, the UU Peace Fellowship, UU Ministry for Earth, and UUA district and headquarter staff. With the support of the GA Planning Committee, twenty-four facilitators were trained before GA, and a database manager was recruited to manage the flow of data from OST sessions to plenary sessions.

After the GA space was opened during plenary by Dr. Bishop, more than 1,100 people attended the first OST sessions, in which people were invited to volunteer to facilitate breakout sessions on issues they cared about. A total of 120 sessions were coordinated and publicized; 978 people attended one or more of these sessions, resulting in suggestions about programs and issues that GA attendees wanted to bring to the attention of the UUA Board. These suggestions are included in this packet.

In a second round of convergence sessions, the trained facilitators led participants in a process of creating statements related to the mission of our faith community, rather than to programs and issues. These statements were made available to everyone attending GA, and all participants had the opportunity to make statements of support during a plenary session. Finally, GA delegates used a multi-voting process to prioritize these statements. Each delegate had a total of five votes to cast on a Scantron sheet, and assistance inj completing the Scantron form was available to anyone requesting it. The ballots were scanned in Boston, and the prioritized results are included at the end of this report

For the first time, participants at a General Assembly were able to let the UUA Board know directly how they thought the Board's work affected the mission of the Association. By their participation, they also signaled their willingness to take part in a process with which most were not familiar, to provide guidance to the Board, and to learn first-hand about a strategic planning process that could be of use to their congregations, districts, and organizations.

As one person noted on his/her GA evaluation, the real value of the use of OST lies in the attention the Board pays to the results. We hope both the process and the prioritized outcomes will be of significant interest to the hard-working members of the UUA Board.

Respectfully submitted,
Dr. Helen Bishop
Project director for Open Space [Technology]
