

One and One

One Thing Going On

Celebrate Marriage Equality with Photos

We want you to send your top-notch witness, engagement, and ceremony photos celebrating marriage equality to the UUA! We want to display them, share them on social media, and use them in many more ways to honor and support our work for equality. Images received by September 15 will be considered for a photo display in the lobby of 25 Beacon Street and the UUA president's office.

Find more info and start sharing your photos today.

One Useful Tool

Ministerial Transition in a Facebook World

These days ministers in transition have a new wrinkle to smooth out in terms of leaving well: what to do about social media connections, like Facebook.

American Baptist minister Mary Miller writes: “Leaving a ministry well is important, and I wanted to do it with integrity. This required having the conversation with my church leadership about the ethical boundaries that would guide our relationship into the future. All of this was familiar territory to me. This was not my first pastorate; I had done this before and handled it all pretty well, I thought.

But then reality struck: a lot had changed in 13 years, and one big change was the advent of social media. In 1999, Facebook did not exist. By 2012, it was an essential tool for business and communication. How do “separation ethics” for pastors apply to the use of social media?"

For her complete article, visit http://www.abpnews.com/opinion/commentaries/item/8800-goodbye-unfriend#.Uicl8J3D_cu p.s. It can be useful to peruse the websites of our interfaith partners! Associated Baptist Press was founded in 1990 as the first and only independent news service created by and for Baptists. ABPnews is an autonomous, nonprofit news organization that offers news, features and opinion articles every business day for a global audience of Baptists and other Christians at ABPnews.com and its companion site, the ABPnews Blog.