

One and One

One Thing Going On

Music Leadership Certification Program

The UUA's Music Leadership Certification Program (MLCP) is a unique, three-year program that summons music leaders to their calling of music ministry, enriches their service to their congregations and to our faith, and enhances their professional perspective and skills. Candidates build foundational understandings in three main areas: UU Heritage and Values, Music Skills and Resources, and Leadership and Interpersonal Skills. Participants have ranged from seasoned music directors in large congregations to very part-time choir leaders in small fellowships. MLCP courses are offered at the annual UUMN conference; this year's conference takes place in Boston during the week of July 20. The 2015 application deadline is March 15. For more information, contact Jan Gartner, Professional Development Specialist: jgartner@uua.org or 585-301-6782.

One Useful Tool

New Media Project

Helping religious leaders become theologically savvy about technology

Founded in 2010, the New Media Project aims to help religious leaders think theologically about digital technology. We think leaders need more than primers in building websites and using social media tools. We believe that leaders of faith communities also need a larger interpretive framework for recognizing and evaluating what's happening in communication today. Even though the major shift in patterns and tools of communication brought about by digital technology will have a lasting effect on the church, compelling theological interpretations of the shift have not yet been adequately developed. Nor do sufficient strategic frameworks yet exist to help faith communities move forward using technology in theologically responsible ways. We aim to change that.

Explore the project on this website: Read the blog, case studies, and theological essays. View the videos from our February 8, 2013 conference, Digital Church: Theology and New Media. Most of it can be accessed from the Findings page. Become part of the community talking about these things. Share your thoughts and insights, questions and ponderings through comments on pages and blog posts. Join our Facebook page or Twitter feed.