Climate Justice Initiative

The United Nations Office (UU-UNO) advocates for change on a global scale by raising awareness and inspiring climate change mitigation initiatives at the community & congregational levels.

As stewards of the planet, we must act to avoid the worst impacts of climate change and heed the call to respect and promote the interdependent web of existence.

Each of us has the potential to be leaders, inspiring action to keep our earth sustainable for all people now and in future generations.

WHAT WE DO

Members of the UU-UNO Climate Justice Initiative:

- Are part of Commit2Respond, a UU-led coalition of people of faith and conscience for climate justice.
- Contribute to the UU-UNO climate portal, a hub of all-ages educational resources on climate science, environmental impact, “what we can do” strategies, renewable energies, ethics, and more.
- Help to counteract the mass contrarian disinformation campaign by fossil fuel interests and other political interests that have stymied action on climate change.
- Present UU-UNO and UN climate justice initiatives to academic and faith organizations.
- Partner with other organizations on climate conscience statements.
